Learn more about HLTH 102: Science and Evidence in Complementary and Alternative Medicine

Wednesday November 8th, 2017
12 noon- 12:30

Rowell 201 B

This course also examines the body of literature on the mechanisms and effects of various complementary and alternative (CAM) therapies including meditation, healing touch, Qigong/Tai Chi, and acupuncture. Students will have first-hand experience with these modalities, and will have an opportunity to conduct an in-depth research on a self-selected CAM therapy.

Please note the following change in the spring 2018 Schedule of Courses:

HLTH 102: Science and Evidence in Complementary and Alternative Medicine will now be offered:

Fridays 8:30-11:30 am

Instructor: David Tomasi PhD, MA, MCS, AAT
