USDA NATIONAL NEEDS GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS
THE RUBENSTEIN SCHOOL OF ENVIRONMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES at the University of Vermont

Full Fellowships for Master's Degrees for Multicultural¹ Graduate Students in Conservation Fields

GRADUATE STUDY AT THE RUBENSTEIN SCHOOL

The Rubenstein School is a multi-disciplinary academic unit that strives to integrate disparate disciplines to create knowledge and develop solutions to a broad array of environmental issues. Faculty expertise includes forestry, wildlife biology, recreation management, environmental philosophy, sociology, policy, planning, economics, conflict resolution, and environmental sciences. In addition, interdisciplinary fields like ecological economics, ecological design, conservation biology, and ecological planning find their home in The Rubenstein School. Along with establishing strong relationships with a network of conservation organizations, the program fosters academic leadership in conservation.

OPPORTUNITIES

Multicultural Fellows will collaborate and be taught by internationally-renowned faculty at UVM and will be part of an academically stimulating environment characterized by seminars from leading scholars and practitioners in the field. Fellows will have access to an array of active conservation-oriented projects and service-learning courses and will have the opportunity to participate in a mentorship program with conservation practitioners and researchers. Fellows will participate in a paid internship experience with a conservation organization after graduation.

ELIGIBILITY

To be eligible for the fellowships, multicultural¹ candidates should be citizens or nationals of the United States as determined in accordance with Federal Law and have a strong interest in pursuing a career in conservation fields. Candidates should not have completed two semesters or equivalent hours of full-time graduate study or been previously enrolled in an academic program at the master's degree level.

FELLOWSHIP BENEFITS

The fellowship will provide:

- 1) a full tuition scholarship for the two-year program ($32,462)
- 2) two years of health insurance ($3,830)
- 3) a two-year stipend of $36,000 ($18,000/year)
- 4) a two-year cost of education allowance of $2,500 put toward a paid internship placement at graduation.

HOW TO APPLY FOR FALL 2008 ACADEMIC YEAR

- 1) Completed applications must be submitted by 1 February 2008, including applications materials submitted to the Graduate College (see: <http://www.uvm.edu/~gradcoll/appinstructions.html>) and several short essays submitted to the Graduate Office of the Rubenstein School of Environment and Natural Resources.
- 2) Please contact Carolyn Goodwin Kueffner (cgoodwin@uvm.edu, 802-656-2511) for instructions for these personal essays and for any other questions about the Fellowship.
