

Landscape Plants for Vermont

by Dr. Norman E. Pellett, Horticulturist and Professor Emeritus, University of Vermont, and Dr. Mark C. Starrett, Assistant Professor, University of Vermont

2002 Release

published by
University of Vermont Extension

This book is designed to help Vermont residents select trees, shrubs, vines, and woody ground cover plants to serve their landscape needs and interests. New to this edition are many recent plant introductions, including the latest varieties of azaleas, rhododendrons, roses, and crabapples. Also new are tables highlighting multi-season plants, wet/dry soil tolerant plants, salt tolerant plants, deer-resistant and susceptible plants, and poisonous plants.

Proceeds from the sale of this book will benefit the Vermont Master Gardener Program, a division of University of Vermont Extension. Trained volunteers staff the Master Gardener Program and provide horticultural education to the public through community service projects across Vermont.
