Vermont in fall for the first time since spending time with grandchildren—retirement! Traveling, volunteering, youngest just started UCSF School of Medicine/geriatrics at Vermont’s only Cottage Hospital in Townshend.”

Dying in America in Putney. Thankful to the IOM for my fourth year as board chair and CEO of the Palo Alto Foundation Medical Center.

Thirty years of practice in oncology at UVM Comprehensive Cancer Center. Fellowship is one of the oldest continuously running programs of its kind in the country. Fellows have been bringing international experts to Vermont since 1995, will now be endowed in perpetuity possible through gifting to the College a piece of property, in Vermont, which was sold to fund the leadership endowment. The Arthur H. Colodny, M.D., Lectureship in Pediatric Surgery, which has been bringing international experts to Vermont since 1995, will now be endowed in perpetuity thanks to the Colodny family’s generosity, and who also pass over the bridge to visit the Department of Pediatrics will be reminded of the legacy of Dr. Colodny, who died in 2001 at the age of 77.

Michael Upton, M.D., ’94, and members of his family have established the Upton Family Scholarship through gifts totaling $100,000. Dr. Upton, an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the UVM College of Medicine, has been a staff psychiatrist at UVM’s Center for Health and Well-Being since 2004. His roots at UVM run deep. His family includes four generations of UVM College of Medicine graduates; dating back to the 1960s. Dr. Upton — a 2014 recipient of the Society for Medicine and Community Award from the Medical Alumni Association — continues to take an active interest in the lives of medical students as well. For over ten years he has been a faculty member on the College’s student wellness committee, and he is faculty co-advisor for the College’s Gender and Sexualities Alliance. This endowed scholarship which honors the family legacy will help to fund the education of future Vermont medical students.

Dr. Upton's scholarship supports medical students through a combination of endowment of his family's generosity and gifts to the College from other alumni. The scholarship provides financial assistance to medical students who demonstrate commitment to community service and contributions to their local communities. The endowed scholarship is named in honor of the Upton family and their long-standing support of the College.

The Upton Family Scholarship is one of several endowed scholarships at the College of Medicine that support students in various ways. These scholarships were made possible through gifts totaling $200,000. Dr. Upton, an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the UVM College of Medicine, has been a staff psychiatrist at UVM’s Center for Health and Well-Being since 2004. His roots at UVM run deep. His family includes four generations of UVM College of Medicine graduates; dating back to the 1960s. Dr. Upton — a 2014 recipient of the Society for Medicine and Community Award from the Medical Alumni Association — continues to take an active interest in the lives of medical students as well. For over ten years he has been a faculty member on the College’s student wellness committee, and he is faculty co-advisor for the College’s Gender and Sexualities Alliance. This endowed scholarship which honors the family legacy will help to fund the education of future Vermont medical students.

The endowed scholarship is named in honor of the Upton family and their long-standing support of the College. The scholarship provides financial assistance to medical students who demonstrate commitment to community service and contributions to their local communities. The endowed scholarship is one of several endowed scholarships at the College of Medicine that support students in various ways. These scholarships were made possible through gifts totaling $200,000. Dr. Upton, an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the UVM College of Medicine, has been a staff psychiatrist at UVM’s Center for Health and Well-Being since 2004. His roots at UVM run deep. His family includes four generations of UVM College of Medicine graduates; dating back to the 1960s. Dr. Upton — a 2014 recipient of the Society for Medicine and Community Award from the Medical Alumni Association — continues to take an active interest in the lives of medical students as well. For over ten years he has been a faculty member on the College’s student wellness committee, and he is faculty co-advisor for the College’s Gender and Sexualities Alliance. This endowed scholarship which honors the family legacy will help to fund the education of future Vermont medical students.

The endowed scholarship is named in honor of the Upton family and their long-standing support of the College. The scholarship provides financial assistance to medical students who demonstrate commitment to community service and contributions to their local communities. The endowed scholarship is one of several endowed scholarships at the College of Medicine that support students in various ways. These scholarships were made possible through gifts totaling $200,000. Dr. Upton, an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the UVM College of Medicine, has been a staff psychiatrist at UVM’s Center for Health and Well-Being since 2004. His roots at UVM run deep. His family includes four generations of UVM College of Medicine graduates; dating back to the 1960s. Dr. Upton — a 2014 recipient of the Society for Medicine and Community Award from the Medical Alumni Association — continues to take an active interest in the lives of medical students as well. For over ten years he has been a faculty member on the College’s student wellness committee, and he is faculty co-advisor for the College’s Gender and Sexualities Alliance. This endowed scholarship which honors the family legacy will help to fund the education of future Vermont medical students.

The endowed scholarship is named in honor of the Upton family and their long-standing support of the College. The scholarship provides financial assistance to medical students who demonstrate commitment to community service and contributions to their local communities. The endowed scholarship is one of several endowed scholarships at the College of Medicine that support students in various ways. These scholarships were made possible through gifts totaling $200,000. Dr. Upton, an assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the UVM College of Medicine, has been a staff psychiatrist at UVM’s Center for Health and Well-Being since 2004. His roots at UVM run deep. His family includes four generations of UVM College of Medicine graduates; dating back to the 1960s. Dr. Upton — a 2014 recipient of the Society for Medicine and Community Award from the Medical Alumni Association — continues to take an active interest in the lives of medical students as well. For over ten years he has been a faculty member on the College’s student wellness committee, and he is faculty co-advisor for the College’s Gender and Sexualities Alliance. This endowed scholarship which honors the family legacy will help to fund the education of future Vermont medical students.