I am very pleased to present the results of an extraordinary year in philanthropic support at the College of Medicine. Giving to the College in fiscal year 2014 reached a new record of nearly $22 million, and was a significant part of the University’s record-setting fundraising for the year.

This year’s philanthropy has allowed us to take major steps in meeting our goals to increase scholarship and academic support. Two prime examples of this are the Donaldson scholarship and the Department of Surgery gift.

The late Virginia Donaldson, M.D.’51 was a pioneer in medicine at a time when the simple fact of her gender made the prospect of earning a medical degree infinitely more difficult. But she found a welcoming place here at UVM, and went on to enjoy a long, successful career, and she faithfully “gave back” to the school that had opened the door to that career. She was for many years a generous supporter of research here at the College. This year, her estate provision made possible an important milestone: the first full-tuition scholarship at our school.

This desire to support the work of the College extends to our alumni families, as was evident this year by the efforts of Arthur Perelman, M.D.’52 and his family. The Perelmans established the Charlotte E. Perelman Cancer Research Fund at the University of Vermont Cancer Center last year, to honor the memory of Dr. Perelman’s late wife. This year, their continuing generosity funded an endowed professorship at the College.

Yet another alumnus of the College, Vito Imbasciani, M.D.’85, has helped expand our inclusiveness as educators and clinical practitioners. The gift of Dr. Imbasciani and George DiSalvo has allowed us to offer an endowed lecture series on LGBTQ Health, what is probably the first such endowed lecture at any U.S. medical school.

Thanks to the hard work and generosity of the more than 4,000 donors to the College, we have been able to open new pathways of support for the educational, research, and community engagement efforts that are vital to the mission of our school. This year, we have worked to forge even tighter bonds between UVM and its partner in the academic medical center, the newly renamed University of Vermont Medical Center and University of Vermont Health Network. I believe this close relationship will allow us in the coming years to widen our audience and garner an even greater level of support from across our communities.

Chief Development Officer for Academic Health Sciences

BELIEF IN THE MISSION SPURS FACULTY GIFT

UVM President Tom Sullivan noted that the gift shows that the “faculty have such a belief in their work and the mission of the institution that they are willing to fund it in a most meaningful, selfless, and powerful way. Attracting the most talented faculty to campus is paramount in our pursuit of remaining among the nation’s premier small teaching and research institutions. Gifts such as this from an entire faculty are rare, so [this] announcement is truly historic.”

The funding was made possible by monies set aside by surgical faculty members over the years, and is intended to attract and retain outstanding faculty. The surgery faculty also hope their commitment will contribute to a growing culture of philanthropy in the department by providing a special incentive for others to give. The faculty have not attached names to the Green & Gold professorships they have established, and instead are leaving the naming opportunity available to other future donors who make contributions that elevate the Green & Gold professorships to full professorships.

Ira Allen Society

The Ira Allen Society recognizes UVM’s most loyal donors by acknowledging individuals whose cumulative gift amounts to $100,000 or more, with special recognition given to donors of $1 million or more. Members of the Ira Allen Society play a critical role in the success of the University of Vermont, providing continuous, steadfast support year after year. As an anniversary gift of $100 for each of the first ten years after graduation, qualify Young Alumni Patrons.
Following in the steps of James B. Wilbur, whose 1929 bequest is known as the "Charlotte Fund," to benefit research at the University of Vermont College of Medicine. In 2013 the Perelman family pledged generously, continuing Dr. Arthur Perelman's gift to establish the Arthur Jason Perelman, M.D. Endowed Professorship.

Dr. Perelman has had a distinguished career as a physician, through which, he says, he has learned the key attributes of an effective clinician: acquisition of knowledge, wisdom, perseverance, humility, and kindness. Those fortunate to know Dr. Perelman are keenly aware of how much he exhibits these characteristics.

Dr. Perelman's family is extremely close, and they support his desire to leave a legacy at the University of Vermont College of Medicine.

The Perelman family is a key agent in the ongoing legacy that Arthur Jason Perelman, M.D. and his family established at the University of Vermont College of Medicine and the University of Vermont Cancer Center with two-distinguished endowed funds that will support the clinic in cancer research for generations to come.

Stanley S. Fieber, M.D., has established Endowed Scholarship

In 2002, Stanley S. Fieber, M.D., established an endowed scholarship in the name of his wife, Lenore S. Fieber, who passed away in 2002. In 2013, Dr. Fieber continued his generous support of UVM (where he also received his undergraduate degree, in 1945) with the funding of the Stanley S. Fieber, M.D., 48 Scholarship.

Before his retirement, Dr. Fieber was a senior attending surgeon at St. Barnabas Medical Center in Livingston, New Jersey, director of surgery at Montclair Community Hospital, and a clinical associate professor of surgery at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey. He specializes in gastrointestinal surgery and authored and co-authored papers on the subject. It is Dr. Fieber's enduring hope that his philanthropy inspires other physicians to give.

Seeler’s Support of Simulation is Realistic

Ruth Seeler, M.D.'62 has a decades-long record of support geared toward improving the student experience at her alma mater. Her contributions include many years of service on the medical Alumni Association, including a term as president of the organization, was recognized in 2007 with the A. Bradley Sourle Award, the College of Medicine’s highest honor.

In 2014, when she heard that the Clinical Simulation Laboratory’s mobile unit was due for an upgrade, Dr. Seeler immediately volunteered to fund the overhaul. Her formally called “The Mobile Safari Unit,” the vehicle is now better known in daily use as the “Seeler Simulab.” (Dr. Seeler also likes to call it the “Dr. Ruth Mobile”.) Dr. Seeler visited the College of Medicine this October during UVM Homecoming Weekend and received a tour of the mobile unit. The simulab is used to teach only a few thousand students, but to train many members of community EMS squads throughout Vermont.

Gift from Vito Imbasciani, M.D.’85 Establishes LGBTQ Lectorship Fund

A generous gift this year from the former UVM medical alumnus established the Vito D. Imbasciani, M.D.’85 and George DiSalvo LGBTQ Lectorship Endowment Fund at the College of Medicine. The Fund’s aim is to prepare the procurement of culturally competent physicians who can provide medical care and prevention services that are specific to LGBTQ populations.

Imbasciani, a urologic surgeon based in Los Angeles, Calif., and spouse, George DiSalvo, were inspired to fund the new Imbasciani/DiSalvo Endowed LGBTQ Lectorship Fund following a December 2013 visit and presentation to the College of Medicine community by alumni Donald Evans, M.D., a retired primary care physician and HIV/AIDS patient care pioneer and champ from Connecticut.

An officer in the medical corps of the U.S. Army for more than 28 years and a veteran of three wars, Dr. Imbasciani completed four active duty tours in Iraq and Afghanistan. Despite this service, he was unable to acknowledge or discuss his relationship status throughout his military career, and therefore, unable to have his spouse or children on site upon deployment for deployments or returning home from war. In June 2013, he was selected to introduce President Barack Obama at a fundraising event in Los Angeles, Calif. While delivering his remarks, Imbasciani, whom the president recognized as a source of inspiration for his 2010 repeal of the military’s “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” policy, said “thanks to the unyielding efforts of many, including my husband, Vito, I can serve my country openly and proudly, with my family at my side.”

In addition to his service to the College of Medicine as a Class Agent, Imbasciani, who works at Southern California Permanente Medical Group, serves as chief medical officer for the California State National Guard, and as a member of the California Medical Association’s Board of Trustees. He has a long history as an advocate for such issues as health care reform, veteran medical and improved public health policy. He also holds a man’s degree and Ph.D. from Cornell University and was a Fulbright Scholar recipient. Prior to attending medical school, he served as a professor of music history at Middlebury College.

Hall A in Given

In 2005, when the College of Medicine completed its third home at the corner of Prospect and Pearl Streets in Burlington, the main lecture room was named Hall A. For the next 15 years, students [such as the members of a class in the 1930s shown below right] learned the science of medicine while perched on those rows of steeply-raked wooden seats. When the College moved to the top of the hill in 1968, the designation of Hall A moved too to a slightly more comfortable assemblage of orange-upholstered seats on the second floor of the Given Building.

Today’s learning environment fits today’s medical curriculum. Students take in lectures as a class in the Sullivan Classroom, and they work in teams in the new Larner Classroom. The settings have changed, but the mission remains the same: inspiring a lifetime of learning in the service of patients. This section of Vermont Medicine, named in honor of that storied hall, serves as a meeting place in print for all former students of the College of Medicine.
