Amidst the heightened negative political rhetoric around religious freedom, as well as the conflict in Syria, many have little understanding of the underlying values and beliefs of Islam despite the presence of Muslims among us. Professor Safi will connect the struggles and sources of injustice/oppression, and theorize a compassionate, connected view of social justice from the Islamic tradition.

Date
Thursday, September 22, 2016

Time
5:00 – 6:15 p.m.

Location
Memorial Lounge, Waterman Hall
Reception immediately following in the Waterman Manor

Sponsored by
The Departments of Social Work, Religion, Critical Race and Ethnic Studies, Education, the College of Medicine Office of Diversity & Inclusion, the Office of the Vice President for Human Resources, Diversity & Multicultural Affairs, and UVM’s Residential Learning Communities

For more information, contact Susan A. Comerford, Ph.D. (susan.comerford@uvm.edu)
For ADA accommodations: 656-5665