The Administrative Unit Review Committee (AURC) is charged with evaluating unit performance across the University. This process is similar to the Academic Review Program for colleges and schools. From start to finish, review for a unit typically takes place over a three-year period, beginning with the pre-review planning in year one, the review in year two, and the unit's one-year follow-up in year three.

An Administrative Unit Review practicum student will learn about the AUR process and will develop knowledge surrounding the standards to which units are evaluated both internally and externally. The practicum student will provide administrative support to ensure the review process stays on schedule; tasks include coordinating scheduling, drafting memos, and managing communication timelines.
