

Place-Based Education Certificate

Open to All UVM Undergraduate Students

Access local communities and environments for action-oriented teaching and learning through UVM's Place-Based Education Certificate Program open to all undergraduate students.

In collaboration with Shelburne Farms and other community partners, the program provides unique opportunities for students to immerse themselves in the social-ecological system they are studying while actively engaging and deepening connections with people and places in the local community and environment. Through an interdisciplinary construct, students learn to address local social, cultural, and environmental issues.

UVM routinely attracts students with an interest in environmental education, outdoor education, service-learning, and experiential education. Place-based education is an important approach to understanding the past while fostering a more sustainable future.

Learn More

Rubenstein School of Environment and Natural Resources contact: Walter.Poleman@uvm.edu

College of Education and Social Services contacts:
Simon.Jorgenson@uvm.edu or Regina.Toolin@uvm.edu

go.uvm.edu/pbe-undergrad

THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES

THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT
RUBENSTEIN
SCHOOL OF ENVIRONMENT
AND NATURAL RESOURCES