

University of Vermont
Department of Medical Laboratory and Radiation Science
College of Nursing and Health Sciences

Policy on Service work during the clinical internships for students in the Medical Laboratory Science Program

Definition—Service work: Providing or generating results of clinical tests on patient samples without direct supervision of clinical staff or supervisor managers which exceeds the expected component required for the educational process.

Policy: No student may engage in service work during his/her clinical internships. All test results generated during clinical rotations must be directly supervised by clinical laboratory staff. A student may not record or input results without a staff or supervisor authorization or approval.

Any agreement a student may enter into with a clinical affiliate for employment purposes is not a requirement of the program and is a separate agreement between the clinical site and the student in an employer/ employee relationship.