HEALTH EDUCATION COMMITTEE

Statement of the Health Education Committee

During the recent session of the General Assembly, the House Education Committee considered legislation that would require Vermont residents who graduate from the College of Medicine to either practice in the State of Vermont or repay to the State the cost of their medical education. The Legislature adjourned before the matter came to the full House. However, the Trustees of the University of Vermont were aware of these deliberations and at their March 4, 1978, meeting, committed themselves to review and take a position on the concept. This document states that position and the factors considered in its formulation.

During the 1978 session of the General Assembly, new legislation was introduced by Representative Bonnett of Thetford that would have the effect of requiring Vermont residents graduating from the College of Medicine to either practice in the State or repay to the State the cost of their medical education. As well, it was discovered that Title 16, Chapter 75, Section 2361, of the Vermont Statutes Annotated, 1927, had the intent of requiring such service or payback. However, also uncovered were legal opinions to the effect that this statute was for technical reasons invalid, unenforceable, and, indeed, had never been enforced.
In reviewing both the old and the proposed legislation, it appeared that the arguments in their favor are of two types. The first argument is that the State of Vermont is medically underserved either generally or in specific areas, and that a required period of service by graduates of the College of Medicine should alleviate such shortages. The second argument is that the State of Vermont can, in effect, reduce the cost of supporting the medical college by recovering a portion of that cost from Vermont residents after their graduation. Both of these reasons were examined in some detail.

In considering the question of medical needs of the State, the numbers of physicians in the State and their distribution by specialty and geographic location were considered. Also considered were the steps taken by the College of Medicine to affect the numbers and distribution of physicians in the State. These steps have included an expansion in the class size from 50 to 83 students and a tripling of the enrollment of Vermonters, these actions tending to increase the supply of physicians likely to remain in the State. Steps taken to influence specialty distribution towards primary care areas have included the development of a Family Practice Department and residency program, expanded training in general medicine and pediatrics, and increased teaching in the practice office rather than in the Hospital. Steps to influence the geographic distribution of physicians have included acceptance of medical students from throughout the State of Vermont, the development of teaching practices in rural sites, and the requirement that students spend two months of their Senior Major in a Vermont community. It appears that at the present time there is no significant shortage of physicians in the State of Vermont and that they are relatively well distributed both geographically and by specialty. It also appears that the full effects of the programs just enumerated have not been felt, and there is reason to believe that those few areas currently inadequately served will be well served. Thus, arguments for mandatory service in designated areas does not appear to be justified on the basis of present or future need.

It does appear that the legislation would result in the payback of some fraction of State support to medical education. However, because the State support to the medical college supports activities other than the direct education of medical students, because some graduates would practice in the State and not provide payback, and because the enrollment of Vermonters in the College might drop as a result of legislation, the amount of payback would be only a small portion of the costs of the College. In addition, there would be a series of secondary effects all of which are viewed as undesirable. These include: (1) the loss of some of the best Vermont medical students to out-of-state medical schools; (2) the direction of Vermont graduates to more lucrative but less needed specialty areas; (3) decreased attractiveness of medicine for financially disadvantaged applicants; and (4) the discriminatory nature of the legislation since the State subsidizes the education of many of its citizens, both at the undergraduate and the graduate level.

Also reviewed were other advantages accruing to the State in return for its support of the College of Medicine. These include the availability of a wide range of specialized care that would otherwise be available only in more distant facilities, and the economic impact of Federal, private, and non-Vermont State funds that form the predominate base of support of the College.

The conclusions reached were that there is no major problem with physician numbers and distribution in the State of Vermont that will not be addressed by actions already undertaken, and that the undesirable side effects of financial payback considerably outweigh the potential financial return to the State. It is, therefore, our opinion that the concept of payback under consideration is one that addresses a problem already solved by more appropriate actions, and one that carries with it significant undesirable side effects.

Criteria for Use of University-owned or Leased Land and Facilities for Electromagnetic Broadcast Purposes

WHEREAS, the Board of Trustees previously adopted on April 20, 1974, a resolution governing the management of natural areas, and

WHEREAS, the Board of Trustees previously adopted on February 17, 1973, a resolution concerning special regulations for the management of Mount Mansfield, and

WHEREAS, the Board of Trustees adopted on August 19, 1978, a resolution pledging the University to foster co-location of mountaintop facilities on properties owned or leased by the University, which resolution superseded, in part, the 1973 regulations concerning management of Mount Mansfield,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Board of Trustees recognizes the following criteria as those which must be considered in judging requests for the use of University-owned or leased land or facilities:

1. Site. Both the selection of the specific mountaintop and the location on that mountaintop must be required for adequate signal coverage.

Alternative sites shall be considered and analyzed to determine the actual coverage that could be anticipated, except that applicants will not be required to consider mountaintops which are currently uninhabited or untouched.

2. Public Benefit. Preference will be given to requests which demonstrate potential significant benefit to the public.

In making this determination, the following list will be considered to be approximately of decreasing significance for public benefit:

   a. Public safety.
   b. Public health and general welfare.
   c. Educational and public broadcasting.
   d. Commercial broadcasting.
   e. Public service and utility communications.
   f. Private or commercial communications.
3. Co-location. To the extent that it is possible to do so, proposals will be expected to be designed to use existing buildings, facilities, and equipment. In addition, all proposals will be judged in terms of their potential impact on future co-location.

All proposals and agreements must be designed to facilitate future co-location.

4. Aesthetic Considerations. The construction, installation, maintenance, development, and/or use of any site, structure, or facility shall be such as to minimize detraction from scenic or other aesthetic resources.
