

Strategies and Resources for Involving Undergraduate Students in your Research

Date & Time: April 20th, 2011 from 1 - 2:30pm (tentative)

Location: TBD

Facilitators: Ann Kroll Lerner, Undergraduate Research Coordinator in the Honors College and Kate Westdijk, Program Coordinator in the CUPS Office (with invited faculty guest speakers)

Co-sponsored by Undergraduate Research/Honors College, CUPS, CTL, WID, CPAR Network

Working with undergraduate students can advance your scholarship while providing them with valuable experience! UVM faculty members from diverse disciplines are leveraging undergraduate research to contribute to their research activities. In addition, recent studies have demonstrated that student engagement in undergraduate research contributes to their satisfaction and success in college. In this workshop, a panel of faculty from diverse disciplines will share how they have included undergraduate students in their research activities. Facilitators will share strategies and considerations for successfully including students in your research efforts, as well as key resources (including financial) to support you in doing so. Participants will have the opportunity to brainstorm how undergraduate student involvement might complement their specific research activities.
