Referrals for Professional Editors and Writing Assistants

If you are looking to have a scholarly manuscript edited by a professional writing assistant, you might engage the services of one of the professional editors listed below. We are passing on their information as a courtesy to you, and cannot confirm their credentials, their rates, or their skills as editors and/or writing coaches.

Abigail Carroll, Ph.D.
http://www.abigailcarrollediting.com/
abigailcarrollediting@gmail.com; 802-861-2543
I am a freelance editor and author specializing in helping academics polish their prose so that it reads smoothly, lucidly, and compellingly—whether an article or book chapter headed to press or a thesis or dissertation headed to committee. In the process, I advise on grammar, punctuation, syntax, word usage, and flow, and I can also make recommendations regarding organization and logic if desired. I take particular pleasure in helping non-native English speakers weed out errors and enhance the readability of their writing so that their work appears as the product of a native English speaker's pen

Jaclyn Devino, M.S.
j.devino@hotmail.com; (802) 310-6483
My undergraduate academic background is in psychology and geology. I completed my M.S. in Natural Resources at the Rubenstein School at UVM in 2012. I have experience editing graduate student theses and articles prior to publication. Prior to graduate school, I worked in Public Relations for five years at the University of Rochester in NY. I was part of launching a university research based online publication called Futurity.org. I helped edit and post research from over 60 universities around the world to the Futurity website.

T'ai Chu-Richardson
tai.churichardson@gmail.com
Rates: $50/hour
Description/qualifications:
Trained in AP style, Chicago style, APA style, and search engine optimization.
Meticulous and detailed approach to language.
Happy to provide thorough commenting and alternative wording suggestions beyond simple grammar/spelling/punctuation/syntax/word choice fixes.

Molly Ritvo, MFA
Molly.Ritvo@Gmail.com, 617-605-4727
I am a Burlington based writer & writing tutor who holds an MFA in Creative Writing from Emerson College & a B.A from Tufts University. Additionally, I have experience copy-editing and proofreading trade fiction and nonfiction books, academic books and journals, social science publications, corporate communications, and works by self-published authors. I edit to the Chicago Manual of Style guide. It is an honor to help others tell their stories in more effective & meaningful ways; As Julia Cameron says, "We should write because humans are spiritual beings and writing is a powerful form of prayer and meditation, connecting us both to our own insights and to a higher and deeper level of inner guidance"

On-line editing service: Manuscriptedit.com, Reseapro Scientific Services Private Ltd.
http://www.manuscriptedit.com/
I am pleased to inform you about our services in scientific editing and English proofreading of science, academic, technical, medical, and humanities manuscripts before submission to journals for peer review or pre-production editing after their acceptance. By basing ourselves on the features demanded by publication houses and large corporations, we have created innovative and integrated publication support services for individuals as well as corporations.

OVER
We have experience and expertise in editing, proofreading, writing, formatting, translation and design & development services, enabled by a large pool of PhD & post-doc level subject experts and native English editors. Most of our editors have prior research experience and have themselves published in peer-reviewed international journals; this has enabled us to develop end-to-end solutions that answer the publication support needs of today's clients. These solutions allow you to:

- Prepare an error-free manuscript, ready for submission to journals for publication.
- Convey your research ideas and results clearly and effectively.
- Increase your productivity.
- Increase the chances of publishing your paper.

Contact us on Skype id "world.ring" for a voice chat to know more details about our services, prices, payments, etc.