

Center for Cultural Pluralism presents

SILENCED VOICES

November 1, 2010

7pm

Livak Ballroom

This is a story about Vermont, but it does not take place there . . .

Migrant Farmworker José Obeth Santiz Cruz was killed in a farming accident in December 2009 in Vermont. The VT Migrant Farmworker Solidarity Project sent a delegation to Mexico to return his remains and document his family and community coming to terms with his death and sharing stories about the causes, effects, and their experiences of migration. Their stories draw attention to the conditions and economic policies that force migrants from their homes in Mexico and suggest a need for a new dialogue about the root causes of migration.

The 26 minute film will be followed by a discussion and dialogue with the VT Migrant Farmworker Solidarity Project and film makers.

Co-Sponsored by the Chief Diversity Officer

For more information please contact: Amanda Flores at the Center for Cultural Pluralism at aflores1@uvm.edu or 802-656-7990