Additional Details:

ECHO Lake Aquarium and Science Center is proud to host the national traveling exhibit Race: Are We So Different? from October 2012 through January 2013. Race is the first national exhibit to tell the stories of race from the biological, cultural and historical points of view. Through interactive exhibits, provocative questions, artwork, stories and reflective spaces, the exhibit offers an unprecedented look at race and racism in the United States. For more information on the exhibit, visit http://www.understandingrace.org/home.html.

We hope the exhibit will be a resource for you and your students. To support your participation, we’ve developed several options for university faculty and students:

- Faculty (with ID) are invited to a reception and preview of the exhibit on Monday, October 8th from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. A discussion about how to connect the exhibit to course curricula will be facilitated by Sherwood Smith (Center for Cultural Pluralism, University of Vermont) and Michael Lange, (Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Champlain College).
- Students and their professors can visit the exhibit at the student group rate of $6.00/student and free admission for 5 faculty members. Reservations for this special group rate must be made in advance through ECHO’s registrar, 802.864.1848 ext. 127. Students can either come as a group during class period or on their own with student ID. Room rentals are available for faculty to debrief the experience at our tax exempt rate ($50).
- ECHO has also planned an array of Community Conversations, Café Scientifique programs, and daily programs related to Race: Are We So Different? to engage youth, student and adult community members in conversations about race and identity.
