Why is that study news?

GETTING YOUR RESEARCH COVERED IN THE POPULAR SCIENCE PRESS

What academic research gets covered - or not covered - in the news sections of Science and Nature or the science sections of the New York Times and the Washington Post? Science news editor Tim Appenzeller will give an overview of what editors look for in a research story and provide tips on how to communicate findings in a way that gains the attention of reporters and editors.

Date: Tuesday, March 20, 2018
Time: 4:30 - 5:30
