

AMERICAN NATURE PHILOSOPHERS

1. Wendell Berry, "The Pleasures of Eating"	1
2. Anthony Weston, "Enabling Environmental Practice"	5
3. Henry David Thoreau, "Where I Lived and What I Lived For"	11
"Solitude"	20
"Walking"	25
4. John Muir, "Our National Parks"	41
"The American Forests"	60
"Hetch Hetchy Valley"	79
5. Aldo Leopold, "Marshland Elegy"	85
"Thinking Like a Mountain"	89
"The Land Ethic"	92
"The Round River"	106
6. Rachel Carson, excerpts from The Sea Around Us	114
excerpts from Silent Spring	123
excerpts from A Sense of Wonder	128
7. Garrett Hardin, "The Tragedy of the Commons"	137
"Lifeboat Ethics"	145
"Who Cares for Posterity?"	153
8. Holmes Rolston III, "Can and Ought We to Follow Nature?"	159
"Values in Nature"	171
"Why Species Matter"	181
9. Tom Regan, "The Case for Animal Rights"	189
"The Miniride and Worse-off Principles"	197
"Christianity and the Oppression of Animals"	204
10. Wendell Berry, "Conservation is Good Work"	211
"People, Land, and Community"	221
"The Work of Local Culture"	229
11. Gary Snyder, "Good, Wild, and Sacred"	239
"The Place, the Region, the Commons"	247
"Four Changes", with a Postscript"	259
"Reinhabitation"	267
"Smokey the Bear Sutra"	272
12. Karen Warren, "The Power and Promise of Ecological Feminism"	273
"A Feminist Philosophical Perspective on Ecofeminist Spiritualities"	285
"Toward and Ecofeminist Peace Politics	293
13. David Abram, "Philosophy on the Way to Ecology"	305
14. Thomas Berry, excerpts from The Dream of the Earth	327