The answer occurred to me the other day, and, fighting back pangs of terror, hysteria, hopelessness, I write this warning so that we can get together, fight back, and do whatever is necessary to disprove this prophecy that predicts the apocalypse occurring in a month and a half. I mean, as a species, we've seen bleaker times than right now—the Black Death, World War II, Donald Trump's presidential campaign—so 2012 just doesn't feel like the last year of human civilization.

Still, this Mesoamerican myth worries everyone from anxious Albanians to zany Zuhus. The Mayan Long Count projects December 21st, 2012 as the end-date of the 5,125 year long cycle; the implications are unclear but seem weighty. Humanity is in the middle of the New York Stock Exchange.

November 10th: Canada closes borders after an influx of eighty million American immigrants, most of whom instantly put their names on waiting lists for free Canadian organ transplants. Canada complies by beginning genocide of Inuit tribe to harvest their hearts and livers.

November 11th: President-elect Romney declares an official "War on Vaginas." Soon after, Hillary Clinton gets stoned to death for letting Bill sleep with Monica.

November 12th: Premier Hu Jintao puts Chinese manufacturing into overdrive in preparation for the American economy to shrink into a recession. In the country's urban centers, Republicans and Democrats have formed military juntas, battling block by block for territorial control. Each side has made its voice clear: the liberals continue to occupy, picket, and whine, while the conservatives deep-fry and mutilate Michael Moore's body in the middle of the New York Stock Exchange.

November 10th: Canada closes borders after an influx of eighty million American immigrants, most of whom instantly put their names on waiting lists for free Canadian organ transplants. Canada complies by beginning genocide of Inuit tribe to harvest their hearts and livers.

November 11th: President-elect Romney declares an official "War on Vaginas." Soon after, Hillary Clinton gets stoned to death for letting Bill sleep with Monica.

November 12th: Premier Hu Jintao puts Chinese manufacturing into overdrive in preparation for the American economy to shrink into a recession. In the country's urban centers, Republicans and Democrats have formed military juntas, battling block by block for territorial control. Each side has made its voice clear: the liberals continue to occupy, picket, and whine, while the conservatives deep-fry and mutilate Michael Moore's body in the middle of the New York Stock Exchange.

November 10th: Canada closes borders after an influx of eighty million American immigrants, most of whom instantly put their names on waiting lists for free Canadian organ transplants. Canada complies by beginning genocide of Inuit tribe to harvest their hearts and livers.

November 11th: President-elect Romney declares an official "War on Vaginas." Soon after, Hillary Clinton gets stoned to death for letting Bill sleep with Monica.

November 12th: Premier Hu Jintao puts Chinese manufacturing into overdrive in preparation for the American economy to shrink into a recession. In the country's urban centers, Republicans and Democrats have formed military juntas, battling block by block for territorial control. Each side has made its voice clear: the liberals continue to occupy, picket, and whine, while the conservatives deep-fry and mutilate Michael Moore's body in the middle of the New York Stock Exchange.
Beyond the white house: five key races to watch

by hannah donovan

Most of us have been watching the presidential election. (You have been watching, right? Because it's really goddamn important.) However it ends up tonight, the election may very well tell us the future of the nation. Here are the five key races to watch:

1. Virginia Senate—George Allen (R) vs. Tim Kaine (D)

A Virginia political veteran, Allen was considered one of the Senate's leading Republicans. Kaine, a Catholic charity executive, is running against Allen for the open Senate seat. Allen, a Republican, played a key role in launching the invasion of Iraq. Kaine, a Democrat, is the former Virginia attorney general. The race is proving to be close, with polls in tight agreement:

2. Ohio Senate—Sherrod Brown (D) vs. Mike DeWine (R)

Ohio Senate race is one the most closely watched races in the country. Polls have Democratic incumbent Sherrod Brown leading by 5 points, but the race is competitive. DeWine, Republican, has a strong record of supporting the tea party. Brown, Democrat, has even more of a record of supporting the middle class.

3. Wisconsin Senate—Tammy Baldwin (D) vs. Ron Johnson (R)

This race is interesting because Wisconsin is the home state of Republican Paul Ryan, the Republican nominee for Vice President, although it's unlikely that he will get the Romney campaign an edge. If he does, Thompson is the other hopeful Republican candidate. Baldwin is the first openly gay woman to be elected to the United States Senate.

4. Missouri Senate—Claire McCaskill (D) vs. Todd Akin (R)

Missouri is used to having political fights. McCaskill, a Democrat, has held the seat for 8 years. Akin, a Republican, has a strong record of opposing abortion. The race is likely to be close. McCaskill has a strong record of supporting the middle class, and Akin has been called the most extreme anti-choice candidate in the country.

5. Pennsylvania Senate—Bob Casey (D) vs. Tom Marino (R)

Pennsylvania has been a swing state in recent elections. Casey, a Democrat, has a strong record of supporting the middle class, and Marino, a Republican, has a strong record of supporting the tea party. The race is likely to be close. Casey has a strong record of supporting the middle class, and Marino has a strong record of supporting the tea party.

The election may very well tell us the future of the nation. Here are the five key races to watch:

1. Virginia Senate—George Allen (R) vs. Tim Kaine (D)

2. Ohio Senate—Sherrod Brown (D) vs. Mike DeWine (R)

3. Wisconsin Senate—Tammy Baldwin (D) vs. Ron Johnson (R)

4. Missouri Senate—Claire McCaskill (D) vs. Todd Akin (R)

5. Pennsylvania Senate—Bob Casey (D) vs. Tom Marino (R)
burlington's best running routes

happy hour weekend 10

drunk decidemaking 2012

The 2012 presidential election has been a thoroughly fascinating experience for multiple reasons. This particular year's campaign has been quite the spectacle, with no shortage of drama or controversy. With the election now over, we are left to reflect on the results and the implications they may have on the future of the country. This week's segment will focus on the impact of the election on various aspects of politics, society, and culture. Whether you supported Obama or Romney, there is no denying that this election has brought about significant changes. As we look towards the future, it is important to continue engaging in the political process and to stay informed about the issues that matter most to us. The following is a brief overview of some of the key factors that influenced the election and what we can expect in the coming years. Overall, this election has shown that the American people are more divided than ever, with differing perspectives on issues such as healthcare, immigration, and economic policy. It will be interesting to see how these divisions will play out in the years to come. In the meantime, we can take heart in the resilience of our democracy and the strength of our nation, as we move forward together.
When your eighteenth birthday rolls around, the people around you begin the ritual of trying to make you believe that on this day you cease to be a child. Parents, aunts, uncles, that random neighbor who says you should climb out of the window to meet adult responsibility. But as I sit here at the computer, I'm thankful that they do not expect much from me, for I am an adult now only in name.

It's common knowledge that when a child is born, they are someone's kid, and they grow up until they are someone's adult. On the Internet, we can find many stories about how the people around us change their perspective on you, as we grow up. Parents become even more concerned about their children as they become adults, and they try to remain supportive and understanding throughout this time. We are social creatures, and we tend to change as we grow older, so it's natural that our relationships change too. It's important to remember that everyone goes through the same changes, and we should support and love each other through this process.

On the contrary, it's common to believe that the people around us don't change, which is not true. As we grow older, the people around us change their perspective on you, as we grow up. Parents become even more concerned about their children as they become adults, and they try to remain supportive and understanding throughout this time. It's important to remember that everyone goes through the same changes, and we should support and love each other through this process.
"Sure, a thong can fix the problem, but you know what eliminates it altogether? Free-ballin'. Boom."
keane's strangeland: the soundtrack to my summer

by rebeccasionton

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

In the past, I was sadly disappointed by Keane's previous album Night Train. The band departed from its usual style of vocals, piano, and drums by adding a guitarist. The sound on that album was jarring, and I feared this would be the end of the band I've been obsessed with ever since I was twelve. (Sorry, Keane. I love you to death. But you make it so difficult when you give me a sub-par album. Obsessively following since I was twelve. I think I'm taking it as a personal mission to share my all-time favorite band had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.

The first five issues of this semester's waterfront cover the top five albums of the semester. Featuring my all-time favorite band who had been left off the list, I'm taking it as a personal mission to share their greatness. For those of you who aren't familiar with them, Keane is a British piano-rock band whose fifth studio album Strangeland was released this past May.
More Awkward Cards from Hallmark

Happy Birthday
You're Adopted
p.s. your real mom's in prison and your father's Herman Cain

- It has been reported that Romney masturbated at least once, eyewitnesses say it was an awkward affair.
- Obama has three illegitimate sons training in Siberia
- Romney types at an astonishing rate of three words per minute
- Obama sleepwalks and pees the bed
- Romney has never been to the beach
- Obama has done cocaine (whoops, that one's real)
- Romney likes the feel of thorns on his feet, so he has, on multiple occasions, run through prickly bushes with no shoes on. He then pours pure acetone all over his cuts.

Water Tower Water Pong: look for tabling the week before!