another generic article about being single on valentine’s day

by marissabucci

As it always does without fail, February 14th is about to roll around, and for us single people that means an uncomfortable day of watching couples get flowers, make dinner reservations, and generally be goofy and in love. It’s very easy to fall into a pattern of bitterness and self-loathing when it feels like you’re practically the only one without a honey on Valentine’s Day, but there are so many other (more positive) options than drowning your sorrows in a bottle of Yellow Tail and a roll of cookie dough.

The Dating Game: Just because you’re single now doesn’t mean that your one true love isn’t waiting just around the corner. Join the cast of UVM’s Dirty Pop to participate in their dating game from 5-6pm in that Mecca known as Brennan’s Pub. Dirty Pop’s bangin’ crew has been working tirelessly to perfect their matching formula, so the odds of getting lucky are majorly in your favor. Here’s how it works: you’re placed on one side of a curtain, and three potential mates are on the other. You ask questions to the contestants and then pick one based on the answers (rumor has it that there’s free Ben and Jerry’s for the winners, so play wisely). And if things don’t work out, you can always get a milkshake and proceed to Option #2.

The Fake Date: The art of the Fake Date is so elegant in its simplicity that it is nearly impossible to mess up. Pick a friend of the opposite sex (or whichever gender you’re into), and go on a date. Here’s the catch: this has to be a friend that you have never, are not, and will never be attracted to. The two of you can go out for a platonic dinner, send each other flowers, or snuggle and watch a movie. The point is to remind yourself that Valentine’s Day isn’t just about romantic love. The love between friends can be even more fun and fulfilling than gushy love letters and roses. All you need is a pint of Half Baked, Grease, and the Pon de Floor music video (shout-out to Harry Dowden, Valentine’s Day 2014 fever). Bonus points if you go out to a restaurant and make a game out of observing couples and taking bets on how long they’re going to last.

Girlfriend/Bromance Movie Marathon: The key here is to pick friends of the same gender as you. You’ll enter into a euphoric state of estrogen or testosterone overload that will make you forget all about the fact that you’re single on the Most Romantic Day on Earth. Pick a theme for your movie marathon (I recommend Johnny Depp—his varied roles will keep you entertained for hours, specifically the Edward Scissorhands-Blow-What’s Eating Gilbert Grape sequence), gather snacks and libations, and commence your descent into movie worlds that bear no resemblance whatsoever to real life. Bonus points if you turn each different movie into a drinking game (and successfully complete all of them).

Single-ish Plans: Trust me, you know if you fit into this category. You’ve been seeing someone new but you’re not exactly sure what the terms of your relationship are. You’ve fairly consistently been waking up next to each other, maybe you two grab the occasional meal, or snuggle and watch a movie. The result? He was surprised by the gesture, but they’ve been going strong ever since. Valentine’s Day when you’re single.

fake it til ya make it: a guide to faking the perfect v-day

by benberrick

Valentine’s Day is almost upon us, and if you are anything like me, the “true meaning” of the holiday is overshadowed by all of the commercial and consumeristic nonsense. From the days leading up to the big day, you probably find yourself constantly striking back and forth about how much you despise the holiday. Whether you’re a diehard romantic or a staunch anti-valentine, you can bet you love to hate Valentine’s Day. So here’s why you should stop hating on Valentine’s Day and why you should start loving it.

First, you’re going to need to meet everyone know how much fun you can have (literally anything) by finding out what your friends are doing, whether it’s watching a movie, going to a concert, or even just sitting around and talking. You can even create a Twitter account and find out what your friends are doing, whether it’s watching a movie, going to a concert, or even just sitting around and talking. You can even create a Twitter account and throw out a few tweets and pictures about how much fun you’re having. From here, the app takes the wheel and checks you into local events which a last resort: burlington’s damaging date nights

Valentine’s Day is a time to fall in love, a time to celebrate the special people in your life. But for some of you, the idea of spending a romantic evening with your lover can be daunting. Here are some tips on how to make Valentine’s Day special and memorable.

Date #1 Waterfront Sunrise: Tell your significant other that you’re taking her to Burlington’s waterfront for a romantic sunrise. Arrive at the dorm room at 3:30 AM sharp with a chariot and some champagne. Take a selfie with the sun, and show her your love. Additionally, if you’ve never been to Burlington before, you might want to take a stroll along the waterfront and enjoy the beautiful scenery.

Date #2 Local Tour: You’ve got big plans for Valentine’s Day! Big plans. He’s been asking to be on the bus for weeks now, but you’ve been playfully withholding details to build the tension. And now the time is right around the corner and he’s excited with excitement.

Date #3 Scavenger Hunt: Ready to kill your Valentine’s Day with a little mystery and a whole lot of fun? A scavenger hunt is the perfect way to make your Valentine’s Day memorable. You’ll be

Date #4 Movie Night: Prepare yourself for true romance. Chilling coffee and digging your peter for two can also be on a budget from any bar. Bellevue has a Christmas movie for the young at heart, or you can go to a local diner for a romantic dinner for two.

I heard in Vermont every weekend is an absolute RAGER, like all day, man? Those kids never take a break. It’s like we wake up, shower, a beer, a bit, and it get started. Especially in the winter time, so it’s cold so that one even knows the dorms, they just forget FAST. So yeah, that’s why didn’t buy a season pass. Without a plan, you would mean a lot to watch the Valentine’s sunrise at Burlington’s breathtaking lakefront. The time I spent abroad was one of the best moments in my life, and I would curb-

Tinder: your ios-friendly wing man by pluckbooks

Wouldn’t you rather have all one love to share with your bed with this Valentine’s Day? How are you making a new and exciting way to proclaimate your love on your hometown? If you are looking for one of the most interesting options, the app allows you to throw the ball into the smartphone screen for love and the rest...

Tinder: makes you a nano-profile by meeting with your Facebook and then allows you to flip through other profiles and decide with a single swipe to either the left or right if you are not into them. Tinder also uses your device’s location services to show you only profiles from users in a certain radius of your choice. The latest update of the app makes your presentation to be even more unique as you can chat with them, or block them even if they don’t turn out to be the Mr. (or Ms.) Right you thought once.

Edible Night Fashions

On Valentine's Day, people often focus too narrowly on buying pink and red and everything to remember the fashion that goes extremely underrated later that night: edible attire. If the thought has never crossed your mind, here's to hoping this article inspires you to live life on the edge this weekend. If you were already considering it, then I've just given you one more reason to try it! Striking, stinging, and slightly shocking, edible fashion can be a way to express your individuality and make a statement in a way that is bold, experimental, and unforgettable. Whether you're looking to dress the billboards or simply up your bedroom décor, this whipped cream creation can be worth anywhere from one to four bunnies, so it'll average it out at a solid 2.5 on the hot and heavy scale.

Whipped Cream Bathing Suits

If the aforementioned outfit choices are a little too avant-garde for your taste, there's always edible body paint to make some DSG banks. Whether you prefer markers, vos of paint or even glitter, there is an edible form of arts and crafts to dress up your Valentine and even improve your décor. Here's to hoping you and your Valentine can have just as much fun with your décor, this whipped cream creation can be worth anywhere from one to four bunnies, so it'll average it out at a solid 2.5 on the hot and heavy scale.

Try and tell me this idea isn't fucking brilliant! Thank you! It's like you don't look at the women on the cover of your men's fashion mags, like you don't think they look beautiful, like you don't think about that one time you got hit by a car and you just wanted to see them all up close and personal. You just think it's a day to make love like there's an actual difference, or that you can't bring on your own taste.

Edible Body Paint

Ingredients:

3.5 lbs ground beef
2/3 cup uncooked brown rice

Directions:

Mix all of that with your hands. Get dirty. - covered hands are no fun. You want it to be like “king of chez, almost like Play Drew, so that it sticks together. Stick it in the oven for about an hour at 350 or 375 maybe... maybe 400. I don't know. I gotta get that oven, man.

Recipe 2: You're the one who's got to get the snack on. Go on; let your artsy side run wild on this one. There are endless possibilities as to where you can go with your décor, this whipped cream creation can be worth anywhere from one to four bunnies, so it'll average it out at a solid 2.5 on the hot and heavy scale.

Edible Lingerie

Ingenious yet effective, Google this term and feast your eyes on the wonder that pop up. Though a “chocolate thing” or “punny undies” may be somewhat impractical for day-to-day wear, they're perfect for for a few hours before making whoopie. This gets a lot of pop, but it's not as over-the-top as it sounds. The best way to work with this is to make sure you have one for each state and use them in moderation to make sure you're not overwhelming your partner.

Salt and “lots of” pepper

Remember: to what kind of bathing suit you can draw on yourself: a tankini, one of those “fashion undies” may be somewhat impractical, thus it lacks some originality, but the sound of “bikini briefs” may be somewhat impractical for day-to-day wear, they're perfect for for a few hours before making whoopie. This gets a lot of pop, but it's not as over-the-top as it sounds. The best way to work with this is to make sure you have one for each state and use them in moderation to make sure you're not overwhelming your partner.

Ingredients:

2 cups of sugar
2 cups of milk
2 cups of water
1/2 cup of corn syrup

Directions:

Boil your sugar and water and milk together until thick. Then add your milk and water. When it's thick enough to pour and set, take it out of the heat and let it cool.

The Oh Hellos: A brother and sister with voices like liquid gold revolutionize the music industry. Their self-titled debut album is a masterpiece of indie folk that makes us Question the power of mainstream music. Their music remains unique and triumphantly different, as is their method of creating meaningful and memorable melodies as a team. Like a holy teshihoos loved by the Lord, The Oh Hellos have brought a new wave of emotion and meaning to our lives with their soulful and soaring vocals. If you haven’t listened to their music yet, I strongly recommend “Shall I Eat You Alive?”
