my day in the clink

by billybarou

What had started off as your typical college student's Friday night ended up turning into one of the most interesting weekends I have had here at UVM. As a senior, I thought I had seen it all, but I now realize I was clearly mistaken.

The events of that fateful evening are spotty at best. One moment I was in my house twerkin' amongst my people again, I needed to blow the rest on page 7

I had to get the full jail experience, so of course I worked out and did some prison-movie-style push-ups and sit-ups; I even scarfed down my two free meals.

that he knew the drill here all too well, and was likely also a regular.

The police officer gave me a fleet of "chicken" dish. UVMers: if you think the food here (or really any other food) is bad, head to the drunk tank—there's likely also a regular. a BAC of 0.00. Piece of cake, no? I thought to myself, "I feel pretty good, so I will give it a try." I optimistically blew with all my might, and… the digits keep rising up and up, well over 0.08. The officer turned to me and informed me that I would be in there for a while. Little did I know then that I would, in fact, be there until 5PM...

So, what did I do with my time in the clink? I made the fucking best of it, obviously. I had to get the full jail experience, so of course I worked out and did some prison-movie-style push-ups and sit-ups; I even scarfed down my two free meals. The first meal consisted of "pizza," if you could even call it that, and the second meal was some sort of "chicken" dish. UVMers: if you think the food is bad here, head to the drunk tank for a stint—you will absolutely appreciate the cuisine here (or really any other food that matters) from there on out. While in the clink, you have a lot of freedom of "chicken" dish. becoming a beer snob

the life of a vermonter

by lauragreenwood

Last weekend during a visit at another college, someone offered me a beer and I noticeably hesitated. My indecision was not a result of me already being drunk; a looming responsibility to drive later, or even a distaste for drinking beer. No, I paused because I seriously thought about what kind of beer I would be given and whether it was worth drinking. At that moment, it became clear to me that—as a normal college student at a typical college party—I was a snob: a beer snob. I blame Vermont for why I don't eagerly accept a PBR and as to why I'd rather buy for quality and not for quantity. It's almost sad that I have elevated beer standards now, but then again, let's consider the benefits of refining one's tastes.

After finding out the beer offering was bottled Busch Light, I sighed and begrudgingly accepted (I wasn't in VT and, heck, a party's a party). To me, Busch, Bud Light, Budweiser, PBR, Michelob, etc. are all beer brands that scream "American beer"; however, their shouts are comparable to how McDonald's is "American food" and Miley Cyrus is an "American girl". Their brands evoke cheapness, notions of a uniform culture, and—frankly—poor taste. It's almost weird saying this now, because two years ago I never really liked beer (though I didn't shy from taking one #freshmanlyfe), and, when pressed on the product, I would even go so far as to declare PBR was my favorite beer. PBR. Wow, Laura.

I do understand the economic justification for buying the Buds: a 30-rack of Buds (or any of the above beers) is significantly more affordable on a college budget than a 30-rack of (insert any local beer). Since the party must go on, cheap beer may seem the easiest way to go, but, especially if you've just gotten to Vermont, I suggest opening your eyes (and mouth) to taste what we've got.

Many a times I've heard that Vermont is to beer what the Napa Valley in California is to wine. We are in the metropolis of microbrews, seasonal, sessional, and every beer in between. There's a reason beer nerds flock to this territory for brewery tours. There's a reason even Jack Birmingham and the SGA: The on-staff official student government retreat, Vice President Birmingham, will be the prominent and valued. This team can do a lot more, as naturally everyone in SGA knows before noon the next day. While both parties involved drank illegal in a SG meeting that took place last Tuesday began with a formal and forced apology by the VP, for some sensitive believe he is actually a leader.

Tuition Without Representation: Valerie Darling and Jack Birmingham were looking for evidence of how much students have been on the paying. They are already being paid, but still, it seems wrong to think that the fee, which is supposed to be for the students, is being used for anything else. The meeting concluded with an agreement amongst most students that more diversions are being considered.

The Library Staff: While SGA feels the need to formally thank the Library staff who have been working hard in the last couple of weeks, they are still in need to get better. They have been working hard on the weekends and have made a great effort to ensure that there is a smooth transition to the new semester. It is always good to be appreciated for the work that we do.

All too often, I find my friends and myself discussing the legalisation of marihuana. We can only dreamily discuss about the possible benefits of the world and all international conflict, the harms of turning up anywhere, the expensive gaps operators we all plan to have eventually. Although we often have our familiar agenda, legalization in Vermont may not be too far off the future. Recently, many public figures have spoken out against this, and it seems that the time is right.

On September 11th, the Senate Judiciary Committee held hearings regarding the conflict between federal and state marihuana laws. Senator Leahy has requested that legislation be passed to close the air regarding marijuana-decriminalization and legalization. First, be expressed his concerns about federal law being a serious roadblock in the way of changing state marihuana legislation. He told the Committee that pot use in the US was not going to change, and that our nation needs to begin accepting these facts. Later, Leahy called on the Senate to do more and be following the lead of states who are legalizing marihuana.

Although legislation may seem like the obvious choice for our country, everyone is not looking to that. Kevin Coelho, co-founder of the Smart Approaches to Marijuana drug prevention group, believes our nation will face a major public health issue if we open the doors to marihuana. He feels that telling the public that legislation is a dangerous path to go down. In addition, a primary reason the marihuana market is collecting income. Currently, banks are not authorized to open checking accounts or credit cards to marihuana businesses, which has made their establishment more difficult. This makes dispensaries prime targets for robberies, as well as eliminating an customs house. Committee members criticized recent attempts to regulate pot sales in Colorado, saying the state was doing a good job in keeping product legally within state boundaries.

Despite these serious problems, there are attainable solutions. Federal laws can begin to change, so dispensaries can securely sell marihuana to customers. A serious matter is the enforcement of illegality and legality laws should be put into effect. And of course, federal law should be rewritten to remove marihuana from the government’s list of schedule 1 controlled substances.

One may be wondering how this recent upsurge of positive opinions of legalization has emerged. Last month, UNN medical doctoral candidate Dr. Sanjay Gupta started in his own documentary, where he discussed the ob- servable medical benefits of marihuana and THC. In addi- tion, Republican senator Rand Paul introduced legislation that may see the light of day, which could give the people what they desire.

a review of orange leaf

by ben berrick

Walking into Orange Leaf on College Street can be slightly confusing at first since all you see are dispensers on a wall and a long line of toppings. Orange Leaf lets you choose your container; one of large or small self-serve. Do not be fooled. You do not need to fill the container nor do you want to if you weren’t planning on spending around 200,000 on toppings. Orange Leaf lets you choose your container; one of large or small self-serve. Do not be fooled. You do not need to fill the container nor do you want to if you weren’t planning on spending around 200,000 on toppings. I do have a few hesitations about Orange Leaf, one being that it can be outrageously expensive. Sure, it’s better than 80% of the frozen yogurt places, but to me, Orange Leaf is not really a healthy alternative to ice cream. I am sitting here, looking at my code 5045's average grade in my biochemistry class, thinking about the amount of work that goes into the research and development of these drugs. It is a significant portion of my job to be out in the field, conducting experiments and analyzing data. It is a challenging and rewarding experience, but it also comes with its fair share of challenges. I often find myself spending long hours in the lab, working on projects that aim to improve our understanding of these complex biological systems.

I must say, I am extremely satisfied with the progress we have made in my field. The research we are conducting has the potential to revolutionize the way we approach medicine and healthcare. I am excited to see what the future holds for our work and I am committed to continuing to push the boundaries of what is possible.

As a scientist, I am constantly learning and growing. I am always looking for new ways to approach problems and I am never satisfied with the status quo. I am passionate about my work and I am committed to making a difference in the world.

Thank you for allowing me to share my experience and my passion for science. I hope that my story inspires others to pursue their dreams and to never stop learning and growing.

an ode to ke$ha

Don't get me wrong, Ke$hahas said some questionable things in her career. I doubt she'll ever read this article (because she doesn't) read anything, because she's [both the best and the worst] at hate out loud. I found you on that one, Ke$hah; but there are a few valuable life lessons I learned from your seemingly trivial utterances of songs.

I can firmly say that I am in love with my "crazy beautiful life." I've been living it since birth and, fact, I couldn't have articulated it better myself. Lovers' month one on Keh$a's list to embrace our lives even with all their imperfections.

Ke$hahas us believe in life with our lives as they are and "not what they should be." So easy to let our heightened expectations get in the way of what life is trying to offer and Keh$a has the nerve to refuse to let that happen.

Keh$a endorses unapologetic self-love. She is constantly on the media's radar for her weight fluctuations and for having more of a body than a type. But she has the nerve to make us want to love ourselves, our bodies, and like it.

She has made it a commitment to embrace the fact that she may not have the "perfect figure" but she "celebrates who she got!" Every kind of body. That is the perfect way of what life is trying to offer and Ke$hahas the nerve to refuse to let that happen.

Ke$hahas some variety to the fairly homogenous group of public figures that the public is exposed to. The stories of agents telling them their "bodies should be..." for better or worse.

For never buying into anyone else's idea of themselves, the amount of weight truly breaks my heart and, they got a few surgeries done or lost this life is trying to offer and Ke$hahas the nerve to refuse to let that happen.

She is constantly evaluated for my kids, they are going to have to be exposed to all the stories I won't be able to represent...

Ke$hahas a song about that said won't grow breed, but might grow peas...

by vanessahl

He said, "I don't know why I'm here," but he didn't seem to mind. The hand shifted the gear stick unerringly with ease. Daylight was breaking on the horizon already. The night, like a vast, black expanse, had ended, and the earth grew dim as it does with each day.

But that day was the day we decided to run. We woke up at dawn and dove into the sun. Life wouldn't want to show us, we thought, if we'd had nothing but time, and freedom is harrowing moments to go, but everywhere to hide. Some kind of stable.

And that 'fake' Ke$hahas a smile and a laugh that said won't grow breed, but might grow peas...

Thick rimmed glasses and a typewriter. You sell yourself an artist of words With the click and clatter of your machine, you think you have company in the wee hours. A cigarette smoking in a nearby ash tray. Does it ease your pain? With the clinks and chings of your machine, you think you have company into the wees of the night. A cigarette smoking in a nearby ash tray. Does it ease your pain?

The pretender

For suffering is inevitable and utterly necessary. Embrace the residual effects of despair. Rah! Rah! Rah! Display. When time comes, it will intensely roll into inescapable measures. Accept the duality of our conscious realm. As non-duality. Learn to be bleak and horrible in everything. It has its place. Hold onto intangibility. Don't know... Don't know... Don't know... Don't know.

When I attempt to excavate the primordial reality dancing feverishly in my gaze Burst through the indelible repression And at certain moments of clarity, These earthly impulses swell inside me

Tip o’ the Week
Don’t play cookie clicker, it will consume your soul and replace it with cookies.

things my friends and I can do now that we bought a $1263.80 55 gallon drum of personal lubricant from amazon

We could finally make the slip and slide down Main Street we always wanted.

Get a hose and pump and spray all the freshmen that hang out outside my house on the weekends.

Make every guest in our house uncomfortable by having our living room be completely empty except for the open 55 gallon drum of lube and a large plastic sheet.

Go around applying lube to toilet seats so people just slip right off.

Two words: wrestling pit.

Divide it into 55 one gallon bottles of lube, that’s 22.98 per gallon.

Bobbing for apples.

Hair gel, anyone. This is how the real greasers did it.

It is well known personal lubricant is a replacement for vegetable oil so all we need now is a big deep fryer and we are all set to make exorbitant amounts of delicious french fries and onion rings.

Choco-Tacos. Okay, so I know this doesn’t have anything to do with lube but I’m hungry and I want one.
