spring break is here

what are your plans?

by maxbookman

Don't even think about saying you're just staying in Burlington. Burlington gets pretty empty when all 10,000 of us catamounts clear out. Campus is a ghost town and there's nobody around to chill with. Your options are either skiing or smoking pot on your couch watching Family Guy reruns on TBS. But! What if you were selected to become a member of an elite environmental hazard clean-up team charged with removing the remains of the beached whale that washed up on North Beach two weeks ago? You can say that they were trying to keep the whale alive, but after Shamu ate that girl at Sea World, the authorities decided it would be best to blow it up. Your mission: Picking up charred whale chunks and sticking them in a giant wheel barrel. Now those are plans to brag about.

Make "Oh, I'm just working at my old job for a week," into "Oh, I'm just working to save the refugees in Haiti." Aw, you're just a hard-working college student trying to make a little extra cash to pay off those student loans hanging over your head. You thought you would just call up your boss from your summer job at Hollister and tell her that you would like to spend a week folding seagull-embroidered polos and inhaling unhealthy quantities of the H.Co. cologne that permeates the entire store (and the 50 square foot section of the mall outside the store). What a snooze! Instead, say you're getting paid to go to Haiti to help feed all the starving refugees. They'll need the help, especially now that all the cable news anchors have hightailed it to Chile to cover the new devastating earthquake on the block.

Going back to Massachusetts to watch your little brother's hockey tournament? Make it Vancouver instead. There's nothing sadder than when someone talks about their lame spring break plans and then tries to look on the bright side with something even lam-mer-like, "but my little bro is gonna be in a three day hockey tournament, so that should be pretty cool!" No, dude, that's not going to be pretty cool. Pump it up by changing your thirteen year-old brother into to a twenty three year-old Olympian brother. He just finished up his Olympic service with Team USA and invited you out to Vancouver to party with him for a week, hardcore Canadian style. And you know how crazy those Canadians get.

Turn a family trip to Florida into a classic Spring Break partyfest! So you're going to the Sunshine State with the fam to visit grandma and grandpa. The warm weather will be a nice change, but that's right about where awesomeness will end. Florida, despite everyone's first reaction, really isn't the same thing as St. Thomas or Jamaica. Especially if your old folks live in shitty Pensacola. It's not exactly going to be bikini central. But you're not going to tell anyone about any of that. Instead, say you're going to where the real spring break is at. The Caribbean. Say you're going to St. Thomas with some friends from home for a week of classic Spring Break drunken debauchery, destruction of property, and fornication with strang-ers. Wow, that's original! Just kidding, it's what everyone does, but that's alright, people will believe you. After all, why would anyone lie about their spring break plans.

With March right around the corner, the "madness" is building with UVM sports teams. Let's start with the men's hockey team. As we all know, their titles were broken. Four by eventual National Champion Benjamin Zeidler,
