Rural Ecology and Coping with HIV Stigma $1.6 million

One major aim of this research was to investigate how community HIV prejudice was related to the experience of stigmatization by people with HIV living in the community. A second major goal was to investigate whether the ways in which people with HIV cope with HIV stigmatization affects their psychological well-being and sexually risky behavior.

Role: Co-investigator (note: Had multiple PIs been an option when this grant was proposed Dr. Miller would have played that role).
