

How Can Higher Education Regain the Public Trust?

BRIAN ROSENBERG

Visiting professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, Author of Whatever It Is, I'm Against It: Resistance to Change in Higher Education, and senior advisor to the African Leadership University

Join us for a talk by Brian Rosenberg, president emeritus of Macalester College and visiting professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Dr. Rosenberg will identify obstructions to transformative change in higher education and offer paths to break through for meaningful change that will help regain the public trust.

THE UVM PRESIDENTIAL LECTURE SERIES

For the 2025-26 academic year, the University explores the future of higher education. Changing demographics, upended federal and state policy, new technologies, evolving student and family expectations, uncertain job markets, rising mistrust of the academy, lessons from Covid, technological innovations, and disagreement about the very purpose of an education all raise questions about higher education's ends and the means to those ends.

The Zeltzerman Lectureship is devoted to topics addressing the relationship between "science and other areas of knowledge concerning people as individuals or as societies."
