

University of Missouri

KBIA 91.3 FM

Missouri School of Journalism

Columbia, Missouri

Partnership

Student reporters provide the content for the University managed public radio station, providing news stories and features, under the direction of faculty

Lead faculty

Ryan Famulier, KBIA news director,
FamulinerR@missouri.edu

Collaborators

NPR

Impacts

Student content is produced every weekday and aired alongside content from NPR.

Students

29,866 at the University of Missouri

75 in the partnership, per semester

Student work

Students work alongside professional journalism and professors in coming up with ideas and editing them. The students also help to anchor the station.

Faculty/staff

Faculty are involved in every level of the program. They oversee the administrative tasks, assist with assignments, editing, and anchoring.

Funding sources

The program is funded through listener donations, subscriptions, grants, and university funding