

Denison University

The Reporting Project

Journalism program

Granville, OH

Partnership

Students across multiple journalism classes report on local communities in rural Ohio.

Lead faculty

Molly Born, Writing in Place Fellow,
bornm@denison.edu

Beth Lossing, Assistant Director, Journalism, lossingb@denison.edu

Alan Miller, Professor of Journalism.
millerad@denison.edu

Jack Shuler, Professor of Journalism,
shulerj@denison.edu

Doug Swift, Visiting Assistant Professor,
swift@denison.edu

Websites

The Reporting Project

Collaborators

The stories can be republished by other local media organizations.

Impacts

100 stories have been published.

Students

2,253 at Denison University

80 in the Journalism program

Student work

Student work is assigned and edited in a collaborative environment with the professors that manage the project.

Faculty/staff

The faculty that are involved are involved with the assigning, editing, and even writing of the stories. They try to make it a collaborative process with the students, where they are guided through the entire story writing process.

Funding sources

Journalism at Denison is supported by the Mellon Foundation alumna: Sue Douthit O'Donnell '67; alumnus Ralph Linderman '71; Jean Luce, in memory of her husband and alumnus H. Thomas Luce '55; alumnus Keith McWalter '71; alumnus Hugh Fullerton '64; and alumna Barbara Huestis Jones '63.