

Southeastern University
NextGen Journalism Club

Department of Communication

Lakeland, FL

Partnership

A student club that works with The Free Press, a completely digital platform for local and national news to publish students' local news stories. Time spent editing or writing counts towards students' required journalism practicum.

Lead faculty

Adrienne Garvey, Associate Professor of Broadcasting and Journalism, asgarvey@seu.edu

Collaborators

The Free Press

Impacts

Stories produced by students are seen by the established viewers of the Free Press.

Students

4,538 at Southeastern University

Up to 10 in the partnership, per year

Student work

While Dr. Garvey does officially run the club, students are expected to pitch their own ideas and work together to peer edit the pieces before publication. As students gain experience, they may hold leadership positions.

Faculty/staff

Dr. Garvey is the director of the club and assists the students as needed. She also works alongside Brian Burns, the editor of the Free Press.

Funding sources

The club does not currently receive any funding.