

Eastern Michigan University

Journalism & Media Studies Program

Ypsilanti, MI

Partnership

The upper-level broadcast journalism course is an Academic Service-Learning class that partners with WEMU, an NPR station in the community. Students produce 6- to 8-minute-long audio feature stories to be aired on the station.

Lead faculty

Sadaf Ali, Sali8@emich.edu

Websites

Journalism and Media Studies

Collaborators

WEMU, an NPR station

Students

13,100 at Eastern Michigan University

25 in the partnership, per semester

Faculty/staff

Faculty assist with instruction for students and manage their partnerships with media outlets.

Funding sources

Ford community as well as internal grants.