OTHER SPRING 2018 COURSES TAUGHT BY HISTORY DEPARTMENT FACULTY OR LECTURERS
As of 10/30/2017

GSWS001C GENDER/SEXUALITY WOMENS STUDY (11551)
This course introduces the basic vocabulary of Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies through an exploration of central questions in the field. What is the difference between sex and gender and how are the two related? What are sexual and gender identities? How are sex, gender, and sexuality shaped by society, culture, and history? What is their relationship to politics? How do gender and sexuality intersect with each other as well as with other aspects of identity/experience like race and class? What is meant by terms like sexism, heterosexism, heteronormativity, homonormativity, transmisogyny, and cisgender privilege? How are sex, gender, and sexuality created and maintained in mainstream culture? How have social movements challenged and changed norms around gender and sexuality? We will explore these and other questions throughout this semester-long introduction to the interdisciplinary field of Gender, Sexuality, and Women’s Studies

GRS200A SEMINAR IN GLOBAL STUDIES (15435)
Drawing on the work of anthropologists, architects, economists, historians, political scientists, and specialists in women’s studies and environmental studies, this seminar will offer an interdisciplinary exploration of the construction of American global hegemony during and following World War II. In particular, we will approach this issue through an examination of the siting, construction, and operation of American military bases around the world. Course work will include in-depth discussion of selected texts and films, and will culminate in the production of a 20-page research paper.

HCOL086I HITLER’S RACIAL STATE (11439)
This is an Honors College seminar that centers on the Nazi concept of Gleichschaltung, or bringing German society into full conformity with the ideology of National Socialism and the policies of the Nazi state. Hitler’s regime applied this idea to every aspect of life in the Third Reich, politically, economically, socially and culturally. Most importantly, it sought to create a society based on the idea of a singular and racially/biologically-determined Volksgemeinschaft, a German society that was viewed as a single organism, as defined by the racial/biological ideas and teachings of National Socialism. In that society, there was room for just one biologically-defined group of humans, namely “racially healthy Aryans.” During the years following Hitler’s assumption of power in 1933, four groups of people living in Germany were defined as the biological “other,” and targeted for removal from German society altogether. During World War II, the Nazi regime set out to remove these four groups by physical extermination. Three of these “racial others” were the Jews, the Gypsies (Roma and Sinti), and those relatively few Germans and others in Europe of African descent. The fourth group targeted for destruction was Aryan, namely those Germans with mental and physical disabilities.

HCOL186B ISLAM AND HUMAN RIGHTS (11105)

Are Islam and human rights compatible? Both human rights and Islam raise universal claims that may conflict in some cases. In this course, we will consider various attempts by religious and legal theorists to reconcile these claims through reinterpreting Islam or deriving human rights from Islamic sources. We will explore the practical side of these issues by examining legal documents and legal practices in various Muslim countries, paying special attention to the status of women and non-Muslim minorities.
