Step 1: GETTING READY:

Thinking, Reflecting, Researching and Mapping

Purpose: Your Learning Agreement is an example of a deeply relational document. As a student-written assignment, it also requires significant input from your Field Instructor as well as your review of the course Blackboard page containing the syllabus and assignments and the Department web site outlining field policies and expectations. It presents a wonderful opportunity for collaboration, curiosity, discovery, exploration, visioning, agreement, and building some authentic connections.

1. Reflect on the path you’ve taken to date in terms of social work practice and experience as well as your goals for the future. Where have you been? Who are you becoming as a social worker? Where do you want to be as a social worker at the end of this year? What do you bring to this year’s field learning experience? What are your hopes and aspirations for it? What are you curious about? What questions do you have? Take the time to think deeply so as to not miss any “overlapping issues” that just might reveal connections to some piece of your work this year.

2. Collaborate with your Field Instructor for identification of learning assignments, practice opportunities and tasks. Discuss how to integrate your classroom assignments with potential activities/assignments in the field. Don't forget that they, along with your Faculty Field Liaison and other Department of Social Work faculty, are your guides, consultants, and partners on this journey.

3. Be curious and discover as much as you can about your agency and the opportunities available to you. Take this opportunity to meet with other employees (both staff & administrators) to learn about them and their work. This will not only help you write the description of your field site agency but also identify possible assignments and activities to discuss with your field instructor.

4. Don’t forget to review the course requirements in the SWSS 390 syllabus, the field policies on the Field Education website and on the course Blackboard page as well as in this Guide.

5. Based on these discussions and your research, along with input from your Field Instructor, make a list of what you will be doing in your field placement. In addition to direct contact with clients (individual, family, group), consider such activities as participation in team meetings and trainings, collaborative community partner/stakeholder meetings, interviews with employees in your agency, advocacy with and on behalf of your client population, consulting research literature, etc.. Together these set the stage for your learning assignments in the field this year. Due to the ongoing influence of COVID-19, it may also be prudent to work with your Field Instructor to identify some projects that can be done remotely, especially ones related to research and/or policy. Remember that over the course of two semesters you must show that you have had assignments reflective of work with or on behalf of individuals, families, small groups, communities and organizations.

6. It is absolutely appropriate to use some field hours to prepare and write the Learning Agreement. It will help to have a discussion now with your Field Instructor about how to preserve time for this, as well as the course-required process recordings, the Anti-Oppressive Practice assignment and your field evaluations (December and End-of-Year).
Step 2: Writing the Learning Agreement

(Stop! If you haven’t completed Step 1-Planning, turn back and start at the beginning!) Where you start and how you plan for this year-long journey informs where and how your adventure will go. Planning is key!

Purpose: Following the structure outlined below gives you practice in following a prescribed written format. Ensuring that your written product is in the format required is something you will often have to do as a social work practitioner, whether you are involved in work with individuals, families, groups, (case notes, court reports, insurance billing), organizations (program proposals, manuals, evaluations, grant requests) or communities (advocacy plans, opinion pieces, policy proposals).

There are seven distinct sections of the Learning Agreement, as well as a separate cover page, which, taken together, set the frame for your work this year. Start at the beginning (Agency/Organization and Relationship to the Work) and not the middle (section three: Identification of Field Assignments Connected to Objectives) as clearly your assignments will flow from what you bring to the work as well as your goals, both of which are framed by what experiences and activities the field agency can provide.

SECTION 1: AGENCY/ORGANIZATION DESCRIPTION

Purpose: Transformative practice involves understanding the context of our work. In order to be most effective, we need to understand the purpose, focus, and scope of the organization in which we work. Understanding the agency’s structure, policies, and funding enables you not only to be a more effective practitioner for your client, but also to be a better advocate for systems changes to benefit them. In addition, you are an ambassador for your field placement. You’ll be asked on several occasions (whether in inter-agency meetings or at gatherings with friends and family) to explain, for example, “What does the Happy Heart Agency really do?” Consider this a learning opportunity for you to more fully understand and then be able to better answer that question.

You can discover much about your field placement through formal and informal conversations, brochures and web pages (as part of Step 1) along with “word on the street”. In your own words (NOT cut and paste or direct quotations) describe the agency such as its mission, its function and purpose, its organizational structure (governance, staffing, source of funding, type) and the particular program you will be part of. Thinking about what you don’t know at this juncture and what you are curious about could then frame one of your learning assignments for this year. This is often a section that is expanded upon in the 2nd semester update/revision, the Learning Agreement Addendum.

SECTION 2: YOUR RELATIONSHIP TO THE WORK

Purpose: Consider this as practice for when you go job hunting with your MSW in hand and have to talk about yourself and what you would bring to that particular setting.

How is this setting reflective of a long-held or recent interest of yours? What do you bring in terms of any personal, educational or work experience/background to the work of the agency/organization? Please take the time to think deeply so as to not miss any “overlapping stories” that just might reveal some connection to some piece of where you have chosen to do your field placement this year. Possible areas might include:

a) Personal and professional knowledge and experiences, you entered the MSW program with, along with those you’ve further developed and gained after your first year in the MSW program and your internship. Consider as well any additional understandings, knowledge and skills you gained over the summer. Do not just copy from your first learning agreement
b) Your own personal and professional goals for growth and development in transformative social work practices and becoming an MSW as a result of being in this year’s field placement. Reach for the stars!
SECTION 3: FIELD ASSIGNMENTS

Purpose: This is where the rubber meets the road in mapping your journey. It shows the direct link between your goals, the various field tasks and assignments available at your site and the course objectives. These objectives and their accompanying practice behaviors are found in the course syllabus for SWSS 390. Because this document is due within the first month of placement, your work will be fluid and may change within the complexity of your organization’s context. In other words, it is quite likely that the ideas presented in this section could change over the lifecycle of your internship. An example is in the appendix.

Assignment Description

This includes the actual work you will do with clients, patients, service-users, students, members, policy makers, administrators. It also includes collaborations you will be developing with colleagues and outside community members. Typically, students have between 4-6 different field assignments. Make certain that your assignments, considered in totality will give you the opportunity to make progress on the practice behaviors related to each of the course learning objectives.

Keep wording clear, concise, and specific (such as how many clients, what type of group, the specific theories you will learn about and how, the type of contact with families, your role, etc.). Do your best to use language that reflects what you are learning in the curriculum.

Related CSWE Competencies

Look at your assignments in conjunction with the learning objectives in the field syllabi. Determine whether your assignments (above) will give you the opportunity to meet each of these learning objectives and then show the specifics of your determination next to each assignment. Please only list those objectives that seem “most” pertinent. While you may find that the 9 CSWE competencies could possibly be addressed by a single field assignment or task, as generally any one activity offers multiple areas for learning, for each particular assignment, select no more than those 3-4 CSWE competencies which are most directly relevant to the skills you will be demonstrating through it. This is very important as your ending evaluation will document your progress on them – therefore, you really want to make sure that the totality of your assignments will give you the opportunity to make progress and meet each of the Core Competencies.

If you would like more information about what each of the Core Competencies means in the context of social work education, here is a good resource provided by CSWE, specifically pages 7-9.

Evaluation Process and Progress

Evaluation is also a practice activity. Discuss the plan for how you and your field instructor will be able to determine your progress for each of your assignments. Methods should identify not only the process (the means by which you and your field instructor and others—including clients—will evaluate your progress on each assignment as they relate to the specific learning objectives) but also the criteria (how will you and others know you are making progress towards meeting the objective?). While not required, the practice behaviors accompanying specific objectives could be incorporated into the description of the process for determining your progress/supervision plan.

SECTION 4: SUPERVISION AND SUPPORT

Purpose: Supervision is an integral and essential element of social work practice. Writing this section should be used as an opportunity to start the conversation with your field instructor(s) about what you both want and expect out of supervision. Who and what else might be involved with the supervision and support of your learning? What agency trainings or practices will be involved?

Because your work with your Field Instructor and other supervisor(s) will be central to your learning, describe your plan for supervision and support. In describing this, include both the informal and formal processes and structures. If you have both off- and on-site instructors, describe their respective roles in their supervision of your practice. Consider including any other significant ‘mentors’ or ‘consultants’ to your work as well.

Also include here the agreed upon identified day/time of the weekly formal supervision with your Field Instructor. Because your Field Instructor’s feedback is integral to the Process Recording assignments, inquire as to how much lead time in terms of getting it from you that they will need in order to have time to discuss their feedback with you prior to when the process recordings are due. Include the specific dates when you and your Field Instructors have determined you’re your Process Recordings are due as well.

SECTION 5: STUDENT SAFETY PLAN

After reviewing the particulars of the SW Department Student Safety Agreement Policy and discussing it with your Field Instructor, please narrate your understanding of the relationship between safety and your work within the agency. The Department Policy can be found in the appendix of this document as well as under the Policies tab of the Field Education website.

SECTION 6: MONETARY COMPENSATION

SW Dept Policy: Students are expected to pay their own transportation costs to and from their placement agency. Agencies are expected to pay transportation costs (mileage) in connection with field assignments that include transport of clients or use of an agency vehicle (gasoline). If the student uses his/her own vehicle for transportation of clients or in connection with field assignments, the student is required to carry the appropriate automobile insurance coverage. Students should contact their insurance agency.

If you are receiving any stipend or payment from your field setting, indicate what that agreement is here.

SECTION 7: SIGNATURES

Purpose: Similar to a contract, by signing this both you and your field instructor indicate your agreement with and support for the activities, goals and objectives of this learning agreement. In addition, the subsequent signatures of the Faculty Field Liaison and the Field Education Coordinator indicate that this document meets the curricular requirements of a Specialized Practice (second year) field placement.

Leave spaces for your signature, those of your Field Instructor(s), your Field
Liaison, and the Field Coordinator. Type the names under each line and leave space for the date notation. Prior to turning it into your Field Liaison, make sure that you and your field instructor(s) have signed and dated it.

When lost or confused, stop and ask for directions from your Field Instructor, your Field Liaison (that’s me!) and your classmates.

Remember that this is a journey and there will be unexpected detours and delays, as well as changes of direction and new opportunities and destinations once you think you’ve got it all mapped out. That’s fine. The Learning Agreement is a “work in progress” and will be revised and updated later in the academic year.

Meanwhile, have fun and enjoy the journey…wherever it takes you!
At the beginning of second semester your Learning Agreement is to be formally revised. This is in order: 1) to respond to any Field Liaison feedback on the original document regarding areas needing to be addressed, 2) to identify the changes as a result of completed assignments, 3) to identify any new or clarified assignments which were identified during the December Evaluation conversation or 4) to indicate no changes. You'll see that this formal revision is called the “Learning Agreement Addendum” in the SWSS 390 syllabus.
FIELD ASSIGNMENT EXAMPLES (FOR SECTION 3)

Assignment #1: I (or Ann) will be an active member of the North End Enterprise Zone work group with the goal of working with the community to promote economic development. I will facilitate 2 meetings, prepare reports and make recommendations for community change in this area.

Related Objectives
1. Demonstrate ethical and professional behavior
2. Engage diversity and difference in practice
3. Advance human rights and social, economic and environmental justice
5. Engage in policy practice
6. Engage groups and communities

Evaluation:
I will complete the tasks as assigned. Reports will be well written, comprehensive and free of jargon. I will request feedback from work group participants as well as my field instructor regarding my advanced practice skills such as listening openly and collaboratively and advocating for reforms that enable transformative change. Supervision discussions as well as the content of reports written will reflect my integration of the N.A.S.W. Code of Ethics. In supervision I will outline the elements of my critical thinking re choice of the policy practice intervention. The reflection section of process recordings will illustrate increasing depth in my self-awareness.

Assignment #2: In the role of a school social worker, I will have a caseload of 3 students. I will meet regularly with each student individually and initiate parent/guardian contact. Additionally, I will complete clinical and organizational documentation required by both the school and the community mental health center.

Related Objectives
2. Engage diversity and difference in practice
7. Assess individuals, families
8. Intervene with individuals, families
9. Evaluate practice with individuals, families, groups, organizations and communities

Evaluation
Tasks as outlined will be completed. Feedback from field instructor, teachers, and clients will be obtained. Process recordings will demonstrate how I am employing competing theories of human behavior as well as practice interventions and prioritizing client narratives.

Assignment #3: I will attend at least one training session that is informed by research on practice with people from diverse backgrounds. In addition I will consult research based literature that is focused on working collaboratively with families from different cultures. I will critically examine these research informed practice approaches in supervisory meetings with my field instructor and will thoughtfully apply what I have learned to my practice.

Related Objectives:
4. Engage in practice-informed research and research-informed practice
9. Evaluate practice with individuals, families, groups, organizations, and communities

Evaluation:
Training session attended. Research based articles presented in clinical rounds. Supervision discussions and process recordings will demonstrate thoughtful application of research based knowledge related to diversity.
S.W. Department Policy on Student Safety Agreements (Section 5)

Field agencies and organizations are responsible for communicating a plan of safety for any and all students confirming a placement with them. Since most agencies and organizations have existing safety procedures, policies, or practices they should feel free to refer to that which already exists. However, it is important that field instructors and students discuss general plans for safety within the first two weeks of the field placement. Safety issues could include things like approaches to working with potentially violent or unpredictable client situations, making home visits to places where the student may be unwelcome or there is doubt about the acceptance of the visit, working with clients who are incarcerated or on furlough for violent assaults, and responses to threatening statements, letters, phone calls, e-mails or other communications directed to the student or other agency personnel.

Section Five of the student’s Learning Agreement will be the student’s understanding (a description/summary of the discussion between student and field instructor) of the relationship between “safety” and their work within the agency.

If an incident occurs in which a student is personally threatened or hurt, or if the student is involved in an accident of any kind, the student will immediately inform the field instructor and faculty field liaison. The faculty field liaison will inform the field education coordinator. An incident report will be completed by the field education coordinator and placed in the student’s file. The field education coordinator will review the situation with the student, faculty field liaison, and field instructor, and together they will determine the student’s readiness to return to the field.
