Position Announcement:

Andrew Harris Fellowship Program
Academic Fellowship in the Department of Sociology
College of Arts and Sciences
The University of Vermont

The University of Vermont is pleased to announce an academic fellowship position in the Department of Sociology in the College of Arts and Sciences (CAS) at the University of Vermont (UVM). UVM is especially interested in scholars who can contribute to the College of Arts and Sciences diversity plan, which was designed in part to ensure faculty, students, and staff members from underrepresented and marginalized populations are an integral part of the life and governance of the institution.

Description
Andrew Harris was not only the first African American graduate of the University of Vermont (class of 1838), he was also the first African American college graduate in the United States to champion the abolition of slavery and to demand full equality for people of color. The Andrew Harris Fellowship honors his legacy by recruiting and supporting artists/scholars from groups that have been historically underrepresented in the academy. The College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Vermont has a demonstrated commitment to cultivating an artistic, intellectual, and social environment that actively promotes diversity among its staff, faculty and students.

The Andrew Harris Fellowship is open to BIPOC and is designed to bring promising early-career scholars to the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Vermont. The Fellowship aims to increase racial diversity at the University of Vermont, where in 2020 persons of color comprised 13.1% of faculty and staff and 18% percent of students. Andrew Harris Fellowship program is intended to assist CAS in reaching its diversity priorities and goals.

Fellows are required to teach one course each semester (two courses over the year) for the College of Arts and Sciences, and deliver one research colloquium talk per year at the university related to the Fellow’s research (see “Area of Expertise” below). The fellowship (Postdoctoral Associate appointment) includes an annual stipend, university health insurance, moving expenses, and research funds will be provided.
Area of Expertise
The UVM Sociology Department seeks a candidate with research and teaching interests in health, health care, health policy, social inequities, and social justice. Desired specializations of applicants include the role of racism and social inequities in producing health disparities, patterns of racial and ethnic disparities in health and health care, issues of racism in medicine and other health professions, and societal efforts aimed at combatting structural racism and enacting public health and health-care reform. Beyond that, candidates who do mixed methods research, combining qualitative and quantitative methods, are of particular interest, as are those with additional interests in law and society, social welfare policies, and criminal justice reform.

Possibility of Tenure-Track
This Fellowship is offered as a full-time, 12-month Postdoctoral Associate appointment (September 1 through August 31) in the Department of Sociology in the College of Arts and Sciences. Fellowships may be renewed for up to three years on the basis of performance and budgetary feasibility. Fellows establish and pursue their own research agenda with guidance through a mentorship program tailored to help the fellow to transition into a tenure-track faculty position at the end of the Fellowship. If, during the Fellowship, the Fellow decides to apply for a tenure-track position at UVM, the Department of Sociology will vote about converting the position to tenure-track and send the hiring recommendation to the Provost for approval. Such a tenure-track position would be 40% research, 40% teaching, and 20% service. The teaching load on the tenure track is 2-2 the first year and 2-3 thereafter. Courses taught would serve the Sociology Department, the Health and Society Program, and the Critical Race and Ethnic Studies Program in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Eligibility Criteria
- U.S. citizens and permanent residents (LPR) are eligible to apply
- Evidence of high potential to contribute to the College of Arts and Sciences diversity plan (see below)
- Earned Ph.D. in sociology.
- Applicants must also possess teaching experience at the undergraduate level
- Evidence of high accomplishment as assessed by a faculty committee that will examine the Fellow’s scholarly record, as well as a minimum of three letters of recommendation

How to Apply
Review of applications will begin April 19, 2021 and will remain open until filled.

UVM College of Arts and Sciences Diversity Plan
CAS aims to become a role model for the creation of a welcoming and socially nurturing environment that actively promotes a sincere appreciation of diversity. To achieve our purpose, CAS will:

- Ensure faculty, students, and staff members from underrepresented and marginalized populations are an integral part of the life and governance of the institution
- Substantially increase the representation of women, minorities, and other marginalized groups among faculty, students, and staff
- Engage all students, faculty, staff and community members in rich curricular and co-curricular experiences that enhance their understanding and appreciation of people of diverse personal and group histories, identities, and perspectives

Scholarly Community at the University
The University of Vermont offers rich opportunities for engaging with scholars of sociology, race and ethnic studies, and healing, healing, and health care. Faculty members in the Sociology Department, the Critical Race and Ethnic Studies Program, and the Health and Society Program in the College of Arts and Sciences will provide mentorship to the Fellow.

The Sociology Department consists of twelve faculty members whose research and teaching centers on bringing sociological perspectives to analyze current social issues. Such issues include social inequality; affluence and poverty; the family; criminal justice; social deviance: gender and sexualities; aging; race and ethnicity; race relations; population health; health care; environmental sustainability; and social responses to disaster.
The Critical Race and Ethnic Studies Program (CRES) is a dynamic group of scholars in the College of Arts and Sciences who approach the study of race and ethnicity through the lens of many different disciplines. Some of those disciplines include anthropology; economics; English; environmental studies; gender, sexuality, and women’s studies; global studies; political science; religion; and sociology; among others. In our program, we focus on the centrality of power relations in the development of the social categories, identities, and experiences of marginalized peoples.

The Health and Society Program (HSOC) at UVM provides a network for transdisciplinary collaboration in research and teaching. HSOC brings together faculty across the university in an interdisciplinary cross-college program whose mission is to promote critical understanding of the social, cultural, economic, political, environmental, and psychological contexts that shape varied human experiences of health and illness, and healing and healthcare. In the College of Arts and Sciences, HSOC has faculty in anthropology, sociology, philosophy, psychology, and religion. In other colleges at the university, the program has faculty in education, environmental studies, health sciences, nutrition and food sciences, and statistics.

The Region
Burlington, Vermont is a New England university city situated on the shores of beautiful Lake Champlain to the west, and bordered by the Green Mountains to the east, both of which offer easy access to year-round outdoor recreational activities/sports. Burlington is within driving distance to major US and Canadian cities and was recently voted one of the healthiest states in the nation and one of the most desirable cities in which to raise children.
