

FACULTY RESOURCE NETWORK

New York University, NY, NY June 11 to June 15, 2018

These opportunities are available to UVM tenure and non-tenure track faculty whose primary assignment is teaching, and who have a .75 FTE for nine months or more.

NETWORK SUMMER 2018

Network Summer is one of the largest and most successful faculty development programs in the nation. Each summer, more than two hundred faculty members from Faculty Resource Network and affiliated institutions converge on New York University's Washington Square campus for intensive seminars or independent research residencies that enhance and revitalize their teaching and scholarship.

Seminars offered:

- Classroom Teaching Effectiveness
- Designing Student Assessments Using Technology and Media
- Entrepreneurship in Action
- Food in the 21st Century: Health, Environment, and Culture
- Forty Years of Revolution: Understanding State and Society in the Islamic Republic of Iran, Then and Now
- Gender and Sexuality in Film
- Reacting to the Past – Greenwich Village, 1913: Suffrage, Labor, and the New Woman
- Separating the Signal From the Noise: The Science and the Communication of Climate Change
- Social Media and Literacy in the College Classroom: New Pathways to Learning
- The Haitian Experience in Literature
- The Uses of Antiquity: The Classical World in Contemporary Thought
- Writing Successful Grant Proposals

"I would certainly recommend these opportunities to all faculty. They are well worth your time."

- Julie Roberts
Professor

"One of the highlights of my professional career at UVM has been, without a doubt, the opportunity to attend programs and events organized by the Faculty Resource Network." -Tina Escaja, Professor
